

Veterans' Review Board Application for Review

Information for Applicants

The Veterans' Review Board (VRB) was established to provide an independent review of decisions affecting certain Veterans' Entitlements Act 1986 pensions and other benefits. The VRB is normally constituted by three members and holds hearings at which the applicant may attend and be represented. While the Repatriation Commission and the Military Rehabilitation and Compensation Commission (MRCC) may also attend these hearings, they do not usually do so.

This sheet provides basic information to applicants about the VRB, how it operates and how applications are dealt with.

What decisions can the VRB review?

The VRB can review most decisions made by the Repatriation Commission under the VEA and the MRCC under the MRCA on such matters as:

- a claim for acceptance of injury or disease as service-related;
- a claim for war widow's pension;
- the assessment of the rate of pension paid for service-related incapacity; or
- claims for the grant of attendant allowance.

The decision letter you received will have advised you of your appeal rights and provided a link to the DVA specific appeals webpage and email address for those who wish to seek further information. If you are not sure if your decision can be reviewed you should contact the Department of Veterans' Affairs (DVA).

How soon must I apply?

As there are time limits, if you are dissatisfied with a decision you should apply in writing for a review as soon as you can. The time limits are:

VEA

- Where the decision is in respect of the death or incapacity of a veteran - 12 months from the date you receive notice of the decision (but maximum arrears can only be paid if you apply within three months of receiving notice of the decision).
- Where the decision is one assessing a rate of pension or concerning a claim for attendant allowance - 3 months from the date you receive notice of the decision.

MRCA

- The application must be made 12 months from the date you receive notice of the decision and must set out the reasons for the application.

What happens after I lodge an application?

1. The Department of Veterans' Affairs (DVA) will let you know that your application has been received.
2. DVA will prepare a report containing copies of its documents relevant to your case.
3. DVA will send you a copy of its report and give you 28 days, or longer if you ask, to study it and send in any comments you wish to make. You may wish to discuss the report with your representative, Local Medical Officer, or other adviser.
4. DVA will then send its report and your comments to the VRB (although it is possible that any comments you make may lead the Repatriation Commission to make a decision in your favour without the matter going further).
5. The VRB will write to ask you how you want it to deal with your application and to find out whether you wish to appoint a representative.
6. The VRB will then make arrangements with you to progress your application. Your case may be finalised during an Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) Process or at a hearing.
7. Following a hearing, or in some cases an ADR event, the VRB will send you a copy of its decision and reasons. If you are dissatisfied with this decision you may appeal the decision of the VRB to the Administrative Appeals Tribunal. The Repatriation Commission and the MRCC also have the right to appeal to the Tribunal if it is unhappy with the VRB's decision.

For any further assistance in completing your application form, please contact DVA. The addresses and telephone numbers are on the back of this page.
